

National Labor Relations Board strikes pro-employer stance

Tuesday, December 12, 2017

Barry Kearney, of counsel of Cozen O'Connor's Labor & Employment department, was quoted in Business Insurance about the new pro-employer changes by the National Labor Relations Board. The memo "signals a retrenchment from the Obama era of decisions that were definitely leaning towards employees and labor unions," said Barry, a former NLRB associate general counsel, who spent 46 years at the agency before joining Cozen O'Connor in August.
