

Mailbag: Should our company set up on-site testing for COVID-19?

Friday, May 15, 2020

Debra Friedman was quoted in HR Dive about what should be considered if an employer offers onsite COVID-19 testing. Regardless of the type of test employers go with, testing should be conducted in a well-ventilated area, preferably somewhere private or that is sectioned off, said Debra. She followed with employers should pay to provide all individuals conducting the testing with personal protective equipment, as well as a touchless thermometer or scanner.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment