Welcome and Introduction by Stuart A. Shorenstein

Businesses today rely on cyber networks and electronic technologies to operate. But the digitization of the modern marketplace introduces risks as well as rewards. Transmission of or exposure to a computer virus, unauthorized access to a computer system, disclosure of protected information – these are just a few of the many serious perils that businesses may confront. Join Richard Aborn, President, Citizens Crime Commission of New York City and Austin P. Berglas, Assistant Special Agent in Charge for Cyber, FBI New York Field Office and Cozen O'Connor attorneys on May 8 for a half day program providing advice on the how and why you must protect your sensitive information.
