

Judge Halts Seawall Construction at Singer Island Condo Tower

Thursday, November 3, 2016

Simeon Brier and Matthew Criscuolo, members of Cozen O'Connor's Commercial Litigation Department, and Thomas Dye, a member of Cozen O'Connor's Intellectual Property Department, discuss an emergency motion filed on October 14, 2016, on behalf of their client, Jeffrey Orelove, to halt construction of a $2 million seawall behind the client's oceanfront condominium. Simeon explains, "Orelove maintained unit owners weren't given proper notice before the board approved the project and weren't given enough information to make a decision." Thomas adds that "Orelove moved into the building in 2014, and he wanted to be educated about the pros and cons of seawalls before reaching an opinion."
