

SLC 2022 Preview: What to do When OSHA Comes Knocking

Monday, September 12, 2022

John Ho spoke with EHS Today discussing how to prepare for an OSHA visit as well as how to respond to and even contest citations. "One of the best things to do is let the OSHA inspector know that the Company has the same objective of keeping employees safe. In my experience, when safety professionals are able to convincingly convey to OSHA that the Company prioritizes safety and is willing and, in fact, eager to listen and learn from OSHA about better safety and health practices, that goes a long way to establishing a great collaborative relationship for the present audit and equally important for the future," John said.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment