

Workers turn into amateur sleuths to track virus cases

Sunday, July 19, 2020

Aaron Holt was quoted in The Washington Post discussing employers providing a safe work environment during the COVID-19 pandemic. Companies cannot “consciously ignore” the possibility that their workers are getting sick at their jobs and keep that information from the government, says Aaron. “Generally, in my experience, the clients I’m talking to are doing their best but it’s an imperfect picture,” he says.
