

DOL's New Wage Rule With Extra Liabilities May See Lawsuits

Thursday, August 10, 2023

Lawrence Prosen was quoted in a Law360 article discussing the Davis-Bacon Act, a new U.S. Department of Labor Rulemaking that allows prevailing wages on federally funded construction projects. "I've read hundreds and hundreds [of rulemakings, and] it's very well written ... clearly a lot of thought was put into it," said Larry. "[But] I could see somebody fight about the implementation. Did they look at the right data? Did they look at a sufficient range of data? Was the data accurate?"

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Construction Law
- Government Contracts