

'Everyone is Emotionally Exhausted': Law Firms on Back Foot Amid Delta Variant Surge in South Florida

Wednesday, August 11, 2021

Susan Eisenberg spoke with the Daily Business Review about the recent rise in COVID-19 cases and the impact it has on returning to the office. “In the spring we were fairly confident, like the rest of the world, that this was going to get beat and we were going to all be back to some semblance of normalcy by the fall,” Susan said. “We took it out to September, thinking that was plenty of time—one, to get as many people as possible vaccinated, and two, to give the vaccine a chance to start to control the virus and see the numbers come down. We just all expected that.”
