Did you just receive a demand for recognition from a union purporting to represent your employees or a petition for an election from the National Labor Relations Board? Have you seen union cards around your workplace? Was your competitor across town recently organized? Not sure what comes next?

Join us for a webinar exploring the mechanics of union organizing, in which we will discuss:

- The process for responding to a demand for recognition or a representation petition.
- How the Board’s petition and election procedures work and issues to consider in connection with demands for recognition and representation petitions, such as determining the appropriate bargaining unit.
- The Board’s recent Cemex decision, the implementation of the “quickie election rules,” and other considerations that arise during Board proceedings.
- Practical tips for communicating with employees about unions and do’s and don’ts regarding responding to union activity in the workplace.
