How will testing unvaccinated employees work under Biden's vaccine mandate?

Thursday, November 4, 2021

David Barron was quoted in the Dallas Morning News discussing the challenges employers face with the latest COVID-19 vaccine requirements for employers of 100 or more employees. David said most companies he's worked with aren't convinced there will be enough tests available if even a small percentage of workers choose testing over shots. "That's going to be a real problem," he said. The new rules apply to an estimated 84 million private-sector workers. He said even if only 10 percent opt for testing nationally, companies will need millions of tests each week.

To read more of this article, click here.

COZEN O'CONNOR