

Zoom's Sudden Rise Presents Test For New Calif. Privacy Law

Friday, April 3, 2020

Matthew Siegel was quoted in a Law360 article discussing how Zoom shares and secures personal data. With the company's recent large presence in helping conduct business, they have been running into issues regarding new privacy laws. Matthew explains, "One argument that we've been hearing that the plaintiffs' bar is considering using is if a company violates one of the provisions of the CCPA that consumers can't sue under, then that would support a claim that the company acted negligently or committed unfair practices."

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Technology, Privacy & Data Security