Department, will be speaking on this webinar called "Offering Courageous Advice when Allegations of High-Level Misconduct Exist" hosted by PBI. One of the most difficult ethical dilemmas arises when there are allegations of misconduct by a high-level person within an organization. Often, advice must be given quickly, and judgment calls made under pressure, but publicity concerns, timing, potential conflict issues, lucrative buy-out provisions in executive contracts, and close personal relationships with client representatives cloud the issue. Explore how to recognize these scenarios, and examine the guidance provided by the Rules of Professional Conduct, in deciding when and how to offer difficult, but necessary advice.
