

Cozen O'Connor's Interview with Al Qaeda Operative Renews Focus on Saudi Arabia and 9/11

Monday, February 9, 2015

Cozen O'Connor attorneys recently interviewed imprisoned former Al Qaeda operative, Zacarias Moussaoui, after Moussaoui wrote to the presiding judge requesting the opportunity to testify in the 9/11 lawsuit against Saudi Arabia. In his sworn statement to Cozen O'Connor attorneys at the "Supermax" prison in Colorado, Moussaoui testified that prominent members of Saudi Arabia's royal family were donors to bin Laden's terrorist organization in the late 1990s. His testimony has sparked renewed interest in the evidence Cozen O'Connor has developed in support of the claims against the desert Kingdom, and resulted in a chorus of calls from Congressional leaders and thought leaders for the release of the 28 redacted pages of the 9/11 Joint Inquiry Report, which reportedly address evidence of possible Saudi involvement in the 9/11 attacks.
