

US election: what will the maritime sector need from the Biden administration?

Monday, November 9, 2020

Jeff Vogel was featured in an article published by Ship Technology discussing what key changes the Biden administration will need to put in place for the maritime industry. “The industry needs some further support and some form of relief to offset the economic impact that we’ve seen in 2020 as a result of the economic downturn and COVID-19,” Jeff says. “The sector has been going along with reduced cargo demand and increased operational costs from the need to provide personal protective equipment to their crew members and just deal with a new operating environment.”

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Maritime Litigation
- Maritime Regulatory
- Transportation & Trade