

Liberals Target Grocers With Changes to Competition Act, Threaten Tax Measures if Prices Don't Stabilize

Monday, September 18, 2023

Michael Osborne was quoted in a Globe and Mail article discussing the proposed changes to the Competition Act to combat food inflation prices. According to Michael, the changes would do little to fix the underlying cause of price increases. "Competition helps lower prices, but it is not a fix for inflation," he said.

To read the full article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Antitrust & Competition