

FDA vaccine approval is good news for markets, employment, economy

Monday, August 23, 2021

Michael Schmidt was quoted in NBC News discussing the FDA's approval of the Pfizer-BioNTech's two-dose COVID-19 vaccine. Vaccine skeptics could be increasingly isolated as more employers embrace mandates. The dismissal of a Texas court case and guidance from the Justice Department had already emboldened more employers to mandate vaccinations, said Michael. The approval Monday will accelerate that momentum, he said. "For those employers who were still waiting for that issue to resolve itself, I think they'll be more likely to implement mandatory vaccine policies," he said.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment