

Vaccinated or not, many workers want to remain remote

Thursday, February 18, 2021

Michael Schmidt was quoted in CNBC discussing employees returning to work once they are vaccinated. “Far fewer people will want to return to the office five days a week,” said Michael. “The million-dollar question is how many days fewer than five will be required?” That could largely hinge on the nature of the job, he said, such as whether employees interact with clients on a regular basis or collaborate on a team rather than work independently.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment