With the start of a new administration, what changes, if any, can U.S. businesses expect that will impact their imports, exports and supply-chain operations?

Kristi Zentner and Heather Marx will share up to date information on the latest developments in trade issues under the Biden administration and will provide strategies to evaluate your supply chain and import practices, so that your business can more readily adapt to the continually evolving trade landscape.

They will examine how trade relations, not only with China but also with new changes in the UK-EU landscape, have affected American businesses in the global marketplace, outline the recent changes in customs practices and court rulings, and discuss how successful businesses are responding to the new developments in anti-dumping and countervailing duty measures.
