As the latest COVID-19 surge takes hold across the country, the federal government, the State of California, and various local cities and counties have once again enacted public health safety measures. These measures impact employers' obligations but can be confusing and often contradictory. Join us for a discussion on the obligations that California employers must follow. This webinar will address the current guidance from the California Department of Public Health, Cal/OSHA, and local city and county orders and best practices employers can implement to comply with these orders.
