

3 Tips For Employers Worries About The Omicron Variant

Tuesday, November 30, 2021

John Ho was quoted in Law360 discussing best practices for employers handling the omicron variant of COVID-19. Employers should keep an eye on transmission rates in their area. If they have a high number of public-facing employees, for example at a grocery store, they might want to get out ahead of the variant and be "more aggressive" with mask and vaccine requirements, he said. But given the competitive labor market, in a situation where an employer has a bare-bones staff in a region ambivalent or hostile to public health requirements, they might need to tread more carefully, he added.
