

Employers need to have a game plan now for returning to work after coronavirus

Wednesday, April 15, 2020

David Barron spoke with Employee Benefit Adviser about employers preparing to reopen nonessential businesses. “Even though we don’t know when this is going to be allowed to happen, employers should already be thinking about what they’re going to do once their offices are open,” says David. “There’s going to be significant changes to the workplace; it won’t go back to the way things were before.” David discussed best practices for office management, how to address employee anxiety and how the workplace might be different going forward.

To read more of this article, click here.

Related Practice Areas

- Labor & Employment